

Before beginning this survey, remember:

- Take your time & validate the person's humanity.
Introductions are really important. Introduce yourself without rushing & explain what you are doing. Be polite and respectful of their space. Use non-threatening body language.
- Share the importance of the survey.
If the respondent is not familiar with your work, share the importance of their participation in your survey.
- Respect the person's choice to participate.
If an individual does not wish to speak to you, thank them and move on. Do not insist on having them complete a survey.
- Preface sensitive questions and give them an option to skip
When asking sensitive questions, let them know the "next few questions are sensitive in nature, but they are not meant to make you feel uncomfortable." Give them the option of skipping questions whenever they are not comfortable with them.
- Think of homelessness as an experience not an identity.
Avoid using terms like "homeless person" which reduce the person to that identity (in this case a homeless identity) and instead use words such as "experiencing homelessness." Remember anyone can fall into homelessness on any given day, all it takes is not having a place to sleep one night.

Introduction:

My name is [interviewer name] and this is my partner [partner name] and we are students at Regents School of Austin. I have a 15-minute survey that I would like to complete with you if you don't mind. The answers will help us determine the impact of Community First village.

The survey is in three parts: life before Community First, life after, and other general questions. Most questions require choosing the best option from a provided scale. Some questions require a worded answer. Some questions are of a personal nature, but know you can refuse or skip any questions. Please answer as honestly as you feel comfortable doing. The information collected will go directly to Mobile Loaves and Fishes.

If you do not understand a question, let me know and I will be happy to clarify. Do you have any questions before we get started?
